Rita Mae Brown shared with us many of her wise thoughts, and one of the most profound of them is the following: "Language is the road map of a culture. It tells you where its people come from and where they are going." The author emphasises the influence of language structure on the culture of countries in which this language is used. 62.

This thought is very true, here are the following arguments to prove this position. Firstly, Russians ~~value~~ generally value ~~their~~ their families a lot. So, we have a huge variety of word forms to express it such as "Mamyuka", "Mamyja", "Mamuxa"... This peculiarity in our language facilitates us to ~~teach~~ teach our culture to the future generations. Secondly, Americans in general do not esteem their families so much. Moreover, they do not value ^{positive} feelings. So, there is a lack of word forms to express feelings in words of English language. For instance, such word form as "Mom" is often used ¹⁰⁰ in American films. It does not show any fervent feelings. ¹⁵⁰ ~~consequently~~, their key values do not include family. Deeping into ¹⁰⁰ their culture, it is quite understandable that they prefer living luxury lives and being in debts. ¹⁰⁰

To conclude, I am convinced that ~~country's~~ country's language directly influences the culture of people living in this country. Looking at ¹⁰⁰ language of a particular country we can define in general key values of it's citizens. ²³¹ ^{no more than} $220 + 1090 = 242$
