Rita Mae Brown, once said "Language is the road map of a culture. It tells you where its people come from and where they are going." And now I want to tell you why I support this quotation.

I agree that people's language can tell you a lot of things. It can tell you where person is from and ~~wa~~ what their culture is.

For example, once I met a foreign boy. He was traveling around the world with his family, but they stayed in my town to get a rest. I was curious about his journey and tried to talk to him about it. He told me many interesting things about a country he was from and shared with me his thoughts about each of them. Then, I asked him about his opinion about my country. He said that it looks just like his one, and he loves it as much as his motherland. I've got curious again and asked him about his country. Long story short, we shared our experience and thoughts about our cultures. But all of that could not happen, if I didn't know foreign language.

In conclusion I want to suggest you to learn more languages. Because you never know when it can help you. And someday it will give you a chance to talk to nice people.
